Once the task manager is open, click the Startup tab. Here, you will see all the different applications that Start at the start. But not everyone is willing to do it. Check their 'C' on Stasta' C. If a program or app is enabled to perform at the start, you can deactivate it by selecting it and then click off on the bottom right. And just like your application is disabled to start when you turn on the system. Do it for all applications that you don't need to start. Related: how to show the tempo cpu on Windows 11 Method #3: from the settings of the app itself most of the applications that have the ability to perform at the start also have an option to enable or disable the start even inside of their settings. Let's take the example of Steam. If you open the app and go to your settings> interface, you will find a steam Perform when my computer starts the option. All you need to do is deselect this box and save the settings (press OK). If you access the settings of any application, this option is invariably found, just make sure it remains deactivated. Related: as PIN PU Apps in Windows 11 Start Menu Method #4: from the Startup folder the applications that are added to perform at the start also obtain listed in the startup folder on the computer. So, if you want to stop an application from opening to start, simply eliminate them from this folder. Here's how to go to it: press Win + R to open the Run box, type Shell: start and hit Enter. This brings you directly to the Startup folder. Alternatively, you can navigate in the folder alone. The address for it is: C:\Users\Username\AppData\Local\Microsoft\Windows\Start Menu\Programs\Startup here, check with the right mouse button on the program that you do not want to run at the start e Select Delete. There are various other parameters that can be enabled in order to know which applications to take most of the resources. For this, click with the right mouse button on one of the parameters and select the following two parameters to show: disk i/o to the start -up CPU at the start these two parameters give you the specifications regarding the activity of the disc and the time needed to start applications. The applications that are high on both of these parameters should be those to be disabled first of all. As you can see in the previous example, Steam takes the opportunity too many resources, which is why we let him go. Search online on the app if you are not sure of an application and what it does, you can want to know more before deactivating it. You do not want to deactivate the programs that are critical for the correct functioning of the system. If you see an application that has an enabled state, but you are not sure what it does, simply click right on it and select Search online. This open a Bing search on the program and what it does. You get a fairly good understanding of if or you should not disable it. Fixed: á Ć disabledá Ć ™ button is gray in the task manager if you meet an app or a program that is not able to disable because the button to do it is gray, it means that the administrator has disabled (consciously or unconsciously) the app/program to be modified. This could be because the program is defined for á Ć á Ć of users *and make changes to it influence the settings of other users on the same computer as well. But it is easy to get around if you are the administrator, just log in as an administrator and a high instance of the task manager: this should allow you to turn off the app. the other thieto bypass the gray deactivation button is to use Method #4 and Method #5. We hope that you have been able to disable all the unnecessary applications and programs that are set to run on startup. This will not only speed up how quickly the computer starts after access, but also prevent instances of such applications to appear on the screen at startup. RELATED For all new features of Windows 11, a annoying trait has been transported by its predecessor. Whenever you download a new app, the developer has the option to open it whenever you turn on your PC or laptop. This may not be a problem if you always open Chrome or File Explorer anyway, but every single session needs how Spotify or Microsoft Teams immediately? For most people, the answer is a no clamorous. Unfortunately, many applications automatically launch when the default setting starts. To prevent this from happening, you will have to manually turn it off on an app-by-app basis. However, there are three relatively simple ways to only do that in Windows 11. How to turn off Windows 11 startup applications in Settings This is definitely the easiest way to control which applications open at startup: Open SettingsSelect 'Apps' from left paneWith this section, choose 'Startup' Now you will see a list of all applications that can be configured to start when you log in. By default, these are sorted by name, but you can change this in status or startup impact Just click the button next to something you want to turn off and the changes will be applied automatically As you can expect, the same process can be used to allow specific apps to run at startup.
